REPORT

In today's era, road accidents are rampant. However, mortality rates have come down significantly due to improvements in automobile technology. Nevertheless, there are many potential hazards on the road that can cause injuries or even death. Department of Biochemistry organized an awareness one day workshop on "First Aid and Road safety " with collaboration with First Aid and Emergency Department, CMC Hospital Vellore-1, on 28th September, 2016 at 2.00pm. More than 200 members participated and benefitted. This work shop mainly focused on Drivers and Conductors of College Bus, and non teaching staff members. The participants are educated in effective way dangerous present on the road to immediate care provided to an injured person, and maintaining the road safety, because it can prevent the situation from worsening if any causality occurs. This programme was headed by Dr.V.Prabha, Head department of Biochemistry .All staff members of the department and students actively participated in the work shop. The session was ended with interactive session followed by Vote of thanks.
